h say, don't you remember,

In the days when we were boys.

The old woods and nutting jeys?

When the days were getting chill.

Bringing wood from off the hill?

But when evening lamps were lighted

From September through November

How we'd built ourselves a fire

And we never seemed to tire

An' we had to do a obore.

All at once our joy was blighted,

Happy, careless days of boyhood.

Oft your pleasures we recall;

And in careworn years of manhood,

Would be young again in fall.
